

Contents

About the Covers	x
From the Series Editors	xi
Acknowledgments	xix
Archive and Document Collections	xxi
Map 1. The Russian Empire, 1914	xxiii
Map 2. Eastern Russia and Northeast Asia, 1914	xxiv
Willard Sunderland and David Wolff
Introduction: The Other Side of the Map: Russia's Great War and Revolution from a Northeast Asian Point of View	1

Russia and Japan: Cautious Collaborators

Dmitrii Pavlov

Japan and Russia, 1914–18: Cooperation and Hesitation	25
---	----

Saito Seiji

Policy Making and the Siberian Expedition	63
---	----

Yaroslav Shulatov

World War I in the Far East: Views of Russian Military and Regional Authorities	97
--	----

Wartime Transfers and Cross-Influences

Takao Chizuko

- World War I, the Siberian Intervention, and Antisemitism:
The Reception of the Protocols of the Elders of Zion in Japan 125

Tomita Takeshi

- General Araki Reconsidered: His Views on Russia and Warfare during World War I and the Siberian Intervention 153

Yokote Shinji

- The Ideological Impact of World War I on East Asia:
The West, Communism, and Asianism 175

Clifford Foust

- The Russian Railway Service Corps: John Frank Stevens and
America's Changing Intervention in the Far East and Manchuria 201

Ono Keishi

- Japan's War Expenditures and Military Finances
during World War I and the Siberian Intervention 221

Igor Saveliev

- Chinese Labor in the Russian War Effort 259

Benjamin Isitt

- "No Unity of Policy or Command": Canada and the Allied Occupation of Vladivostok, 1918–19 283

Hayashi Tadayuki

- The Czechoslovak Legion and Japan in Siberia, 1918–20 309

Borderland Entanglements

Willard Sunderland
Baron Ungern's Mongolian Pogrom	331
Nakami Tatsuo
On Babujab and His Troops: Inner Mongolia and the Politics of Imperial Collapse, 1911–21	351
David Wolff
Russia's Eurasian Great War and Revolution: The View from Harbin	369
Notes on Contributors	403