

Contributors to Volume 2, Number 2

Alain Blum is Professor at the Centre d'études du monde russe, soviétique et post-soviétique at the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (Paris). He has published Naître, vivre et mourir en URSS, 1917-1991 (1994), as well as many articles and book chapters on the demography of Russia and the history of population in the Russian empire and Soviet Union. He is now working on the history of Soviet statistics and of statistical administration in the 1920s and 1930s, and on the historical demography of the Russian empire in the 18th and 19th centuries.

V. P. Buldakov is starshii nauchnyi sotrudnik, doktor istoricheskikh nauk at the Institute of Russian History of the Russian Academy of Sciences in Moscow. He is author of Krasnaia smuta: Priroda i posledstviia revoliutsionnogo nasiliia (1997).

Laura Engelstein is Professor of History at Princeton University. Her most recent publications include Castration and the Heavenly Kingdom: A Russian Folktale (1999) and, edited with Stephanie Sandler, Self and Story in Russian History (2000).

Gregory L. Freeze is the Beinfield Professor of History at Brandeis University. He has published monographs on the social history of the parish clergy as well as articles on various aspects of Russian church and religious history. He is presently completing a study of Church and Society in Modern Russia, 1740-1940 as well as a volume on Bolsheviks and Believers in the Yale Annals of Communism series.

Loren Graham is Professor of History of Science at MIT and member of the Executive Committee of the Davis Center for Russian Studies at Harvard University. He is author of many books and articles on the history of Russian science, including a book that was nominated for a National Book Award. He is recipient of the Sarton Medal, the highest award of the History of Science Society.

Oleg Khlevniuk is doktor istoricheskikh nauk and glavnyi spetsialist in the State Archive of the Russian Federation (GARF) in Moscow. He is author of 1937-i: Stalin, NKVD i sovetskoe obshchestvo (1992); In Stalin's Shadow: The Career of "Sergo" Ordzhonikidze (1995); and Politbiuro: Mekhanizmy politicheskoi vlasti v 1930-e gody (1996). He is also editor of Stalinskoe Politbiuro v 30-e gody (1995) and co-editor of Stalin's Letters to Molotov, 1925-1936 (1995).

Nancy Shields Kollmann is Professor of History and Director of the Center for Russian and East European Studies at Stanford University. She recently published By Honor Bound: State and Society in Early Modern Russia (1999). Her current research interests include Muscovite social values and the practice of criminal law in 17th- and 18th-century Russia.

Gary Marker is Professor and Chair of the Department of History, State University of New York at Stony Brook. He is the author of Publishing, Printing and the Origins of Intellectual Life in Russia, 1700-1800 (1985); Reinterpreting Russian History (with Daniel Kaiser, 1994); and The Memories of Anna Labzina (with Rachel May, 2001). He is currently completing a study of literacy and reading in Russia, 1649-1801.

Bruce W. Menning is Instructor of Strategy at the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, KS. He is the author of Bayonets Before Bullets: The Imperial Russian Army, 1861-1914 (1992, 2000) and is currently working on a comparative study of Russian and Soviet entry into the two world wars.

Thomas C. Owen teaches Russian history and economics at Louisiana State University, where he holds the Lewis, Kathryn, and Benjamin Price Professorship in history. His most recent book is Russian Corporate Capitalism from Peter the Great to Perestroika (1995). He is currently writing a study of the Slavophile theorist of Russian economic nationalism, Fedor V. Chizhov (1811-77).

Alfred J. Rieber for the past six years has been Professor of History at the Central European University in Budapest, where he served as chair for four years. He taught at the University of Pennsylvania for 35 years. He has published widely in two major areas: the social history of imperial Russia and Soviet foreign policy.

Gábor T. Rittersporn is Senior Research Fellow at the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique, currently on assignment in Berlin. He is working on Soviet society, culture, and politics, especially in the 1930s.

David G. Rowley is Assistant Professor of History at the University of Wisconsin-Platteville. He is author of Millenarian Bolshevism, 1900-1920 (1987). He has published articles on contemporary Russian nationalism, and he is currently working on a book dealing with the tension between nation and empire in Russian history and the religious roots of Russian national and imperial identities.