

Contents

Preface	xi
Introduction	1

Part I

Chapter 1: Catherine II, Nikita Panin, and the Northern System	19
Antecedents to Panin's Policy... Nikita Ivanovich Panin... The Design of the Northern System... The Northern System in Practice... British Reticence... Success and Failure... An Evaluation
Chapter 2: Britain Solicits Russian Assistance	59
Russian Needs Britain... Britain Needs Russia... An Offer Refused... European Reaction... A Further Appeal to Russia... Spanish Involvement... One Last Effort... Final Thoughts
Chapter 3: Sir James Harris at Catherine II's Court	93
The World according to James Harris... Policies Ensuing from Harris's Views... How Western Europeans Viewed Russia... Negative Contemporary Views... Consequences of those Views
Chapter 4: Britain, Russia, and the Armed Neutrality of 1780	131
Theory and Background of Naval Rights... Maritime Neutrality during the American War for Independence... Catherine Moves to Action... Defining Contraband... Harris Flummoxed... Putting the League of Armed Neutrality to Work... Summing Up
Chapter 5: Russia Attempts to Mediate the War	169
Russia as Mediator of Peace... Redefining Russia's Role in Diplomatic Europe... Further Barriers to Successful Mediation... British and French Responses to Russia's Efforts... Summation

Chapter 6: The Russian View of British Politics	211
Catherine's Comprehension of British Politics... Russia's Response to the War... The Spectre of William Pitt... Post-Pitt... Conclusion

Chapter 7: The American View of Catherine II's Russia	254
American Perceptions of Russia... Rumors of Russian Assistance... Summation

Part II

Chapter 8: The United States and the Armed Neutrality	299
The Vision of Armed Neutrality... Professed Principles of American Naval Policy... The Practice of American Naval Policy... Policing The High Seas... Ongoing American Violations, European Reactions, and Congressional Action... America's Maritime Policy... Summing Up

Chapter 9: Congress Solicits Russian Assistance	340
Congress's New Opinion about Russia... Choosing the Right Diplomat... Initial American Expectations of Militia Diplomacy... Cold Water Thrown on the Dana Mission... Ready, Set, Go

Chapter 10: A New Englander at Empress Catherine's Court	378
An Inauspicious Beginning... Passing Time in Petersburg... John Adams as Friend and Supporter... Congress Rethinks the Mission to Russia... Doubts about Dana... Dana Reports Home...

Chapter 11: Francis Dana and the French Alliance	414
Two Sides in the Continental Congress... Dana's Attitude Toward France... Vergennes's American Policy... Sources of Anglo- and Francophobia... Dana's Understanding of French Motivation... The Real Motivation of Count Vergennes's Policy... Why Some Americans Feared France

Chapter 12: Debating the Impact of American Independence on North European Trade	453
The Lure of Commercial Diplomacy... Dana's Role in the New Diplomacy... Trade between North America and Northern Europe... Russian Reception to American Commerce... Limitations and Fears... The Tobacco Trade... Commercial Competition Assayed

Chapter 13: Practicing American Commercial Diplomacy at St. Petersburg	494
Stephen Sayre... Commercial Diplomacy as Practiced by Dana... The Breakthrough with the Northern Powers... Catherine II's Views Of Commerce... The Realities of Russian-American Trade... Summing Up

Part III

Chapter 14: The Last of the Militia Diplomats	537
Dana Takes Matters in Hand... Russia's Response... Sir James Harris Reacts... Dana's Reactions with Congress... The Mission Ends... The Aftermath of the Mission... Postscript
Chapter 15: Russia Abandons the Northern System	580
Inclination toward Austria... The Fate of Panin's System... Consequences of Russia's Diplomatic Reversal... The Response by Other Powers... Russia Mediates Between the British and the Dutch... The Hague Takes Center Stage... Russian Attitude toward American Diplomats... Aftermath
Chapter 16: Catherine II and the American War for Independence	624
Catherine's View of the American Rebellion... The Case of Corsica... When to Support Rebellion... Catherine's Considered Opinion on Britain's American Policy... Catherine and Republics... Catherine and America... Catherine's Final Judgment
Bibliography	657
Index	699